DEDICATION

To

My Ninety-Five Year Old Grandmother

REBECCA ANN (SMITH) MORARTY

to whom I am indebted, not only for her very valuable assistance in furnishing the family records appended hereto, but for numerous evidences of her love and affection, with the which she was lavish as with periodical "lickin's" (if for something I did not do they served to punish me for something I did which had escaped her notice), and in happy recollection of many choice morsels "popped" into my mouth after I had been tucked in bed at night, (some of the fudge was pretty hard though), I lovingly dedicate this little book.

PREFACE

A number of years ago, having been invited to become associated with a Society of Pioneers, and being required to produce a "Revolutionary War pedigree," I sought to discover the records of my rebellious ancestors.

The work, at first undertaken for this purpose, became of such interest that I was unable to put it aside until I had satisfied my curiosity in a number of directions in which the history of the family extended.

I am happy, now, to be able to give to my brothers and sisters the result of my investigation of the records, extending over a period of years, in the hope that the data gathered may prove as interesting to them as it has been to me.

PREFACE

A number of years ago, having been invited to become associated with a Society of Pioneers, and being required to produce a "Revolutionary War pedigree," I sought to discover the records of my rebellious ancestors.

The work, at first undertaken for this purpose, became of such interest that I was unable to put it aside until I had satisfied my curiosity in a number of directions in which the history of the family extended.

I am happy, now, to be able to give to my brothers and sisters the result of my investigation of the records, extending over a period of years, in the hope that the data gathered may prove as interesting to them as it has been to me.

Major General
LACHLAN McINTOSH

"Frank has no idea of his ancestry except for a picture of his brothers and sisters that his father kept with an old family record, in an old wooden fig box where they had been since 1600. I doubt if he ever had the box himself. I saw it seventy-eight years ago, at his brother's."

-- Mrs. Morarty.

I

McINTOSH

When I first undertook to seek information in regard to our family history, I turned, naturally, to my grandmother (Mrs. Rebecca Ann Smith Morarty), now living at the age of over ninety-five years, knowing her to possess considerable data on the family history, both in the form of records, and in her active mind.

She informed me that the "Queen Anne" rifle, which is still in the possession of our family (and which, incidentally, happens to belong to me) had belonged to her husband's grandfather on his mother's side, whose name was "Klan" or "Klang" McIntosh, and who had been an "aide" on the staff of General Washington during the Revolutionary War.

A search of the records of the War Department failing to reveal that there had been such a "staff" officer during the Revolution, though no less than seven individuals of that name had held commissions during that war, I again applied to "Gram" for more detailed accounts of this soldier. She wrote me of a conversation, held in about 1845, between her husband's mother, Mary Maria (Griswold) Morarty, and a family friend named Fitch who had come to the home of the Morartys to deliver some live stock and remained over night to talk over old times. During the conversation Fitch asked Mary Morarty as to her family and she stated that her father was Captain Griswold, and that her grandfather was "Klan" McIntosh, "an officer in the Revolution - an aide or something on Washington's staff; that he had killed a man in the south in a duel; that he had an only sister "Maria" and named his daughter after that sister and a relation of his wife's named Fannie Scott." Fannie McIntosh married, either at Lyme or at Darien (then Inverness) Georgia, Captain Benjamin Griswold, a nephew of Governor Roger Griswold of Connecticut, who was a ship captain sailing out of Lyme, Connecticut, and whom she had met in the south.

I then turned to Appleton's Cyclopedia of Biography, and to other standard biographical works, and found that the only McIntosh who had occupied, during the Revolution, a post like that described by Mrs. Morarty, was Brigadier General (Continental Line) Lachlan McIntosh, who had come to Georgia with his parents in 1734 and settled in the colony planted by George Oglethorpe. He was born at Raits, near Badenoch, Scotland, the ancient seat of Clan Chattan (which included the McIntoshes, McPhersons, Farquhardts and Davidsons). He was educated in the public schools and at the age of 17 entered the counting house of Henry Laurens at Charleston, South Carolina, returning subsequently to Darien where he became a land surveyor. An officer in the Georgia military forces he was appointed a Brigadier General, Georgia Line, in 1776, and in the following year fought a duel with the Governor of Georgia, Button Gwinnett (a signer of the declaration of Independence) in which Gwinnett was killed and McIntosh severely wounded. The encounter was brought about by McIntosh calling Gwinnett "a scoundrel" because of his criticism of McIntosh's war services.

An account of McIntosh's services states:

"McIntosh marched with a force of 500 men to Fort Pitt, assumed command, and in a short time restored peace on the frontiers of Pennsylvania and Virginia. He completed arrangements for an assault on Detroit, but was recalled by Washington to join General Ben Lincoln in Charlestown, Georgia. He was placed in charge of Georgia troops (Brigadier General Continental Line) and proceeded to Savannah where he commanded the First and Fifth South Carolina regiments, and, after driving the British from their outposts, took an active part in the seige. He was present when the city of Savannah surrendered to Sir Henry Clinton and was made a prisoner of war for a long period. He 'returned to Georgia' on his liberation and found his fortune dissipated and his property wasted."

McIntosh was a member of Congress in ~~1874~~ 1784 and in the following year was named Commissioner to treat with rebellious Indians.

On the occasion of McIntosh's mission in Pennsylvania Washington wrote to Congress concerning him:

"I part with this gentleman with much reluctance as I esteem him an officer of great merit and worth. His firm disposition and equal justice, his assiduity and good understanding, point him out as a proper person to go, but I know his services are and will be materially wanted here."

He was one of the original members of the Society of the Cincinnati, and for many years its President.

McIntosh married Sarah Threadcraft, by whom he had several children. (Plate I). He had, according to the records, an only sister "Maria."

No information seems obtainable as to the whereabouts of McIntosh during his imprisonment following the fall of Savannah and before he returned to Georgia. He may well have been for some time in Lyme. Gram reported that Fannie McIntosh was born in "Inverness" which was of course Inverness, Georgia, in 1779. McIntosh was in Georgia at that time.

The fact that McIntosh was the only Revolutionary officer to whom the data I had applied, though he was a Line rather than a Staff officer, convinced me that this was the true record. Everything checked. He was in Inverness in 1779, his daughter met her husband "in the south"; he killed a man in a duel, he had an only sister Maria, and of course "Klan" could hardly mean anything except Lachlan.

However, I did not accept it there. Some two or three years later, when in Worcester on a visit, I met my Aunt Genie (Emogene) and asked her what she knew of her mother's family. She said that her father's Greatgrandfather was Lachlan McIntosh, General in the Continental Army, that he had "shot the Governor of Georgia" in a duel over remarks made by the governor against the General; that she had lived for some time with her great grandmother and had heard her many times speak of her father. As Aunt Genie was 17 years old at the time of Fannie Marie McIntosh's death, it cannot be doubted that this information is authentic. Aunt Genie did not know so much about her mother's family, but that of course is available from Mrs. Morarty herself.

Though some of the southern descendents of General McIntosh have no knowledge of this daughter (which is the reason why I give this lengthy proof of her existence) there is, of course, no doubt that Fannie McIntosh knew her own father. I might say in passing that Fannie is not the only child of the General concerning whom the southern branch of the family seems never to have heard.

That Fannie Maria McIntosh was the daughter of General McIntosh has been recently confirmed by Franklin W. Morarty, her grandson, whom I had believed dead until recently. I might have gotten the story much more quickly had I know he still lived.

Therefore, regarding the relationship as a settled fact, we shall go back of him and pick up the threads of the McIntosh family history.

When, in 1715, John Erskine, Sixth Earl of Mar, was deprived by George I of his office as Scottish Secretary of State, he went to Scotland in anger and placed himself at the head of the adherents of James Edward (Stuart) the "Old Pretender." He met the Highland chieftains, one of whom was Brigadier General William McIntosh (uncle and guardian of John Mor McIntosh, father of the General of 1776, who was then a boy) and avowed an earnest desire for the independence of Scotland. At Braemer, on the sixth of September, 1715, he proclaimed James Edward King of Scotland, England, France and Ireland. The clans flocked to his standard, but due to the poor generalship of Mar the uprising met defeat at every point. Precious time was wasted at Perth, an attack upon Stirling failed, and William McIntosh suffered defeat at Preston and was imprisoned, with his nephew John Mor, in ~~the Tower of London.~~ Newgate Prison.

At Sheriffmuir, through the incompetence of Mar, though he outnumbered the enemy, a battle was lost to Archibald Campbell, afterwards Third Duke of Arguyll. The King of England, disturbed by the uprising, constructed forts at Inverness, Kilchumin and Kilmallie, and prosecuted a vigorous offensive against the clans. The chieftains became embarrassed, their estates were sold, and even the wearing of the Highland costume was prohibited. The glen folk became impoverished and commenced to seek homes elsewhere. John Mor McIntosh, and a party of 100 highlanders, in 1734 (some authorities give 1735 and 1736) came to Georgia by the ship "Prince of Wales." There, as a Captain in the Highland Light Infantry (Rangers) under Spain, he took part, with his sons, in the Spanish War of 1740-1-2, and during a battle at Fort Moosa, Florida, was wounded and captured. Lachland McIntosh was but 15 years old at this time, and it is not clear whether he was in the Spanish War of 1740, but it is believed so. It was probably here that the "Queen Anne" rifle was used.

The elder McIntosh married Marjorie Stuart Fraser, daughter of Fraser of Garthmore, chieftain of a neighboring clan, and the couple had a number of children. (Plate I). Some authorities state that he married Joan Gordon, but this seems to be an error, unless he married twice, which his genealogist says not.

John Mor McIntosh, father of General Lachlan, was the son of Lachlan McIntosh and Mary Lockhart. Lachlan was in turn the son of William McIntosh, third of his house and third in line of descent from William, First of Borlum, second son of Lachlan Mor (Lochlan Moen) McIntosh, Sixteenth Chief of the Clan-in 1569. The later William married Mary Baillie. (The Baillie family is famous in American History, particular in the Navy in the War of 1812.)

Among the representatives of the McIntosh Clan who came to America coincidentally with John Mor, in 1735, possibly for the same reason, were Andrew McIntosh, of Willington, Connecticut, Duncan, of Lyme, and the Canadian family by the same name which gave the Dominion the great railway builders. Andrew traces his lineage back to McIntosh previously mentioned, Lachlan, Sixteenth Chief of the Clan, through Robert, though if through William of Borlum also I am not informed. Duncan's genealogy is not given. He married "Rachel" and had a number of children, several of them boys, who served in the Revolution where one, Timothy, was killed in battle.

That a very close relationship existed between the various branches of the family is evidenced by the presence of Fannie McIntosh in Lyme, where lived the family of Duncan, and by the presence of Captain Griswold of Lyme "in the south." We show Fannie at both places where there were strong branches of the family, and I think it may be presumed that the Lyme and Georgia McIntoshes were no more distantly related than cousins at least. Records of the marriage of Fannie McIntosh and Benjamin Griswold were destroyed by fire, but there is a possibility that the record of her second marriage with Daniel Miner may disclose the name of her father, officially. I am making a search on that point now and will note the result when obtained.

So, through this family, we show a line of descent to 1569, beyond which the records of this family go back to the war-like Picts of 565 A.D., whom even the Romans were fearful to molest. (See "Historical Memories of the House and Clan of MacIntosh and the Clan Chattan" by Alexander Mackintosh Shaw, 1880. Library of the Royal Burgh of Inverness, Scotland.

GRISWOLD

As has been stated, Fannie McIntosh, child of General McIntosh, was the wife of Benjamin Griswold, a descendent of Matthew Griswold (1620-1698) who married, in 1646, Ann, daughter of Henry Wolcott, and who came, with his brother Edward, in 1639, to Windsor, Connecticut. He later moved to Saybrook, and thence, in 1644, to Lyme. (Edward left Windsor and went to Killingworth, and finally to Springfield where he was a civic leader and where he built the "Old Fort.") By Ann Wolcott Matthew had a son John, who married Hannah Lee, and this couple had a son Matthew, born in Lyme on March 25, 1714.

Matthew Griswold the younger studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1743, was a member of the General Assembly in 1751, and of the Governor's Council in 1759, in which post he was most active in opposing the Stamp Act. He was Judge of the Supreme Court in 1769, Lieutenant Governor of Connecticut from 1771 to 1784, and Governor from 1784 to 1786. He presided over the Convention which ratified the Federal Constitution in January, 1788. He was also a magistrate at Lyme and head of the Colonial Public Safety Committee. In 1779 he received an honorary degree of L.L.D., from Yale. He died in Lyme. He had married Usurla Wolcott, and of this union was born a son:

Roger Griswold; born in Lyme on May 21, 1762. He studied law, graduating from Yale in 1780, when he commenced the practice of law. He married, in 1788, Fannie Rogers, and moved to Norwich, where he remained until 1798.

From Norwich he was a representative in Congress (1795-1805) and was Judge of the Supreme Court in 1807. He returned to Lyme at about this time. He declined the portfolio of Secretary of War, proffered by President Adams in 1801. He was Lieutenant Governor from 1809 to 1811, and Governor of Connecticut from 1811 to 1813. He was active in the opposition of the New England colonies to the War of 1812 and suffered some loss of popularity on that account. He died at Norwich before his term as governor expired. It is not clear whether the date was 1812 or 1813, but it is believed to be 1813.

Captain Benjamin Griswold, husband of Fannie McIntosh, was a nephew of Governor Roger Griswold, by an older brother (name unknown). He was a ship master out of Lyme, in which town he is reported to have married Fannie McIntosh, but the record is believed to have been destroyed in a fire. It possibly may still be found, however, in the records of the old church at East Lyme. He was in command of a ship which was lost at sea in 1811, and never saw his daughter, Mary Maria Griswold, she having been born while he was on the cruise from which he never returned. She grew up in Lyme (her mother had meantime remarried to Daniel Miner) and married John M. Morrarty, Senior (as he then spelled his name,) who was my mother's grandfather.

(Incidentally there is a very cute story about Elisha Miner, son of Fannie McIntosh by her second husband. I am not putting it in because it rattles the family skeleton in the closet, but remind me to tell it to you.)

III

MORARTY

John Mercie Morarty, Senior, husband of Mary Maria Griswold, was born at Eastport, Maine, February 23, 1803. At the time of his marriage he was a government agent to the Passamoquoddy Indians. He enrolled in the Union Army at Plainfield, Connecticut, on August 9, 1862, giving his age as 45 years. He was mustered into service at Camp Norton, Norwich, on September 5, 1862, and was honorably discharged by reason of disability on February 11, 1863, at Campbell Hospital, Washington, D.C., for the reason of "impaired constitution resulting from old age, being 60 years of age at the time of his enlistment.

John Morarty and Mary Griswold had seventeen children, of which John Mercie Morarty, Jr., was the third. He was born at Southwich (or Southwick) Massachusetts, October 12, 1831, and married Rebecca Ann Smith, tenth child of John Gardner and Nancy Case Smith. Two daughters were born of this union, the first - Emogene - wife of Byron H. Evans, of Norwich, and the second Castlena Ellsworth (Lena), who married, on Christmas Day, 1879, Adrian VanderPyl, son of Jan VanderPyl of Boston.

John Morarty, Jr., (the spelling was then Morrarty) enrolled in the Union Army at Hartford on September 21, 1861, for a period of three years, and was mustered into the service as a private in Company "D", 8th Regiment, Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, on the same day. He was transferred to the 31st Company, Second Battalion, Veteran Reserve Corps, about January 18, 1864, and mustered out and honorably discharged as a private on September 21, 1864, at Fort Monroe, Virginia. He participated, among other engagements, in the battle of Antietam, September 17, 1862.

John M. Morarty, Sr., was the son of Edmond Augustus Morarty, born in 1765 at Horton, Maine. Edmond married, November 28, 1793, Ann Denison (born November 10, 1769) and by her had children as follows:

Robert - b. January 30, 1794,
Mary Thompson - b. June 28, 1795,
Mary Denison - b. June 29, 1797,
Phoebe Bishop - b. September 24, 1799,
Andrew Thomas - b. May 6, 1801,
John Mikel - b. February 23, 1803.

Note that the record, which is written in the handwriting of Edmond Augustus Morarty, gives the middle name of his son (and the same is true in his record of his grandson) as Mikel. I cannot account for Gram's knowing both as John Mercie, unless there was a change made.

There is a family tradition that the Morartys were refugees from the Reign of Terror, and that the name was originally Murat, or Marat. While the family may have been French, and the name as stated, it does not appear that there could be any connection with the French Revolution, since Edmond appears in America 20 years before the Republic. Murat had no family in France, his people being Sardinians, and there was nothing in his history which should cause his friends to emigrate. Marat did not appear on the historical horizon until Napoleon, and his descendents first appear in America in the middle 80s. So at least a part of the legend is disproved.

IV

BOWMAN

Nancy Bowman Case, mother of Rebecca Smith, was a daughter of Mary Elizabeth Bowman and Calvin Cooley Case. The family record showing her date of birth as 1800 does not agree with the official birth record, which shows 1801. The official record also shows her name as Nancy Case, daughter of Mary Killgrove.

Mary Killgrove really was Mary Bowman, daughter of Captain David Frederick Bowman, a retired British merchant vessel master who came to America in about 1773 and settled on a farm in "Boston Town." Persuaded by merchants of Boston to make another cruise for them he set sail, but his vessel was seized by pirates and Bowman, refusing to join with them, was either murdered or marooned. The crew claimed he was marooned but there was a suspicion, according to Levi Lincoln, that he was actually murdered. His wife died following his disappearance and was followed in death by her youngest daughter. The other, Mary Elizabeth, was raised by a family named Killgrove, which owned a neighboring farm, and, as she was married under their name, it may be presumed she was formerly adopted.

Captain Bowman was born between 1715 and 1725, since evidence tends to show he retired at an age between 50 and 60. On November 14, 1759, in a letter to William Pitt, the Board of Trade of London recommended him "to be Naval Officer of the Eastern Shore of the Colony of Virginia," but since his name does not appear on the Navy list of that time the appointment evidently did not materialize.

NOTE: Calvin Case and Mary Bowman had eleven children, including three pair of twins.

Calvin Cooley Case, father of Nancy Bowman Case and husband of Mary Elizabeth Bowman (Killgrove) was born October 21, 1779, at Norwichtown, Connecticut, the son of Ebenezer Case and Prudence Cooley.

Ebenezer was the son of John Case and Hannah Ormsby. John was the grandson of Nathaniel Case and his wife Ann, as far as is known by a second son of Nathaniel's, name unknown. He may have been the son of Colonel John Case (See Plate II) and the records would seem to point that way, except that ~~the~~ his ~~Colonel's~~ wife's name was Catharine. It is true that the Colonel's son may have married, a second time, Hannah Ormsby, but as the dates are not available it is not possible to determine exactly whether Colonel John was the father, or one of his brothers.

Nathaniel (or Nathanial) Case, born in 1640, was the son of Jehu Burr Case (c1600 - 1672,) who came to America in 1630 and settled in Roxbury, Massachusetts. He was Commissioner for the United Colonies in 1664.

VI

COOLEY

Prudence Cooley, wife of Ebenezer Case and mother of Calvin Case, was a descendent of Benjamin Cooley (born in 1600), who came with his parents to America in 1630 and settled in Longmeadow, Massachusetts. He was later one of the Selectmen of Springfield, to which city he had removed in 1646, and an Ensign in the Hampshire Regiment. He married in 1642 Sarah, last name unknown, by whom he had a son:

Captain Daniel Cooley (1657-1727). Daniel married Elizabeth Wolcott, and had a son Benjamin, born in 1681, who married Margaret Bliss.

Ebenezer Cooley (born in 1776 and killed at the storming of Quebec in 1758/9) son of ~~Captain Daniel~~ and Margaret Bliss Cooley, married Mary Barnes, and by her had at least two children.

The elder child of Ebenezer was Prudence Cooley, wife of Ebenezer Case. The younger was a son Aaron (1745-1833) who married Persis Cleveland, and by her had a son Benjamin, who married Polly Taylor, a descendent of another branch of the Cooley family. He was a Revolutionary war soldier.

The first Benjamin Cooley was a very active participant in the affairs of the Colony and a man of great ability and prominence in the community. The family of Cooley is intermingled with a great many of the principal New England families.

VII

John Gardner Smith, mother of Rebecca Ann, was the son of John Potter Smith and Ann Leach.

Ann Leach was the daughter, ~~either~~ or granddaughter of Ensign Lemuel Leach, Revolutionary soldier (1745-1825) who married Rebecca Washburn, ~~or of Lieutenant Samuel Leach, also a Revolutionary soldier (an officer) who married Catharine Parks, a widow.~~ At any rate she was a descendant ~~the great-great granddaughter of John Leach (1670-1744) who married Alice, last name unknown. John Leach was the son~~ of Giles Leach (1632-1705) and his wife Ann Noakes, who, the records show, were in America in advance of 1658. A chart showing the Leach family will be found appended, Plate VII.

SMITH

John Gardner Smith was born in Portsmouth, Rhode Island, on February 14, 1797, the son of John Potter Smith and Ann Leach. By his wife he had thirteen children, of whom my grandmother Rebecca Ann was the tenth.

The birthplace of John Potter Smith is not known except as Rhode Island, and there has been some difficulty in tracing beyond his date of birth in 1776, but after an exhaustive search of the records it seems impossible to conclude otherwise than that he was the grandson of Martin Smith (1726-1780), taking into consideration both the locale of the family and the odd christian names.

In 1634 there came to Watertown, on the "Elizabeth" from England, Samuel Smith (1602-1680), wife - Elizabeth (1602-1685). He later removed from Watertown and founded the town of Wethersfield, Connecticut, where, according to the records, he was "antient serjeant" and Deputy of the General Court from 1640 to 1661. In 1659 he founded Hadley. He was Deputy of the Massachusetts Bay Colony from 1661 to 1673 and Lieutenant of Hadley Troop from 1661 to 1678. He was a magistrate and was Commissioner to the Mohawks in 1667.

His son, Lieutenant Philip Smith (1633-1684) married Rebecca Foote, by whom he had a son:

Jonathan, (1659-1720) who married Abigail Kellogg. This couple had a son, also named Jonathan, and father and son fought side by side in the Indian wars.

JOHN GARDNER and NANCY (CASE) SMITH

Jonathan the younger was born in 1659, and married Hannah Wright, daughter of Benoni Wright. He died in 1720. His son -

Martin Smith (1726-1780) was the first man to be called in the Lexington alarm. It appears certain that he had, by his wife Lucy Clapp, a number of children, though I find in the records official notice of but one, Levi (1761-1828) who served through the Revolution and who married Hannah Holland. This couple had a son, Wright Smith, born in 1789, who fought in the War of 1812, and by that son a grandson, also named Wright (1811-1862) who married Hannah Matilda Walker.

We are in some doubt as to the exact parentage of John Potter Smith, but it appears almost certain that he was the son of a brother of Levi. Martin was 35 years old at the birth of Levi. It is therefore not to be doubted but that he had other and older children, one of whom married into the Potter family. Placing the approximate date of birth of John Potter Smith's father at 1750, we find 25 years each between Martin, his unknown son, and John Potter Smith, which is quite within order. I am quite confident that searches I am still continuing will prove this to be correct. There were no other branches in the locality to whom John Potter Smith could have belonged except that of Martin or Levi Smith. I personally doubt if he could be the son of Levi, as Levi would have been only 15 or 16 years old.

X

Lena Morarty married Adrian VanderPyl, son of Jan and Grandson of Adrian VanderPyl.

Adrian VanderPyl, the elder, was born at Ouwerkerk, Zeeland, Holland, on October 7, 1799. There is a tradition in the family that the VanderPyls, in all probability under a more markedly French name (since they were Huguenots) emigrated to Holland in 1685 after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes by Louis XIV. Adrian VanderPyl was married twice, and had five children, as follows:

(By the first wife) Louwerina; born in Ouwerkerke in 1821. She married Marinus Bomm, a resident of St. Anna Land, Thole.

(By the second wife) Martina, born in Ouwerkerkin 1825; married a Vandenberg and moved to Zurich Zee, where she died.

Lena, born in Ouwerkerk in 1827; married John Koopman, farmer, of Ouwerkerk.

Jan (John), father of Adrian, born in Ouwerkerk on November 14, 1829, died in Boston May 15, 1915. (See family record for this branch.)

Nickolas, born in Ouwerkerk in 1831. Later moved to Rotterdam and went into distillery business. Believed to have died there.

John VanderPyl came in 1872 to Boston, with his family and his father, Adrian. He had married Maria Smallegange of Oosterland, Zeeland, and by her had eight children, all but the last three born in Holland. These three were Born in Boston, and two died young. The family record, appended, gives the Dutch names and the names adopted as the English equivalent, though in some cases they do not seem correct. Johanna is variously spelled that way and as Johannah. It is hard to see Adriana as "Jenny."

XI
CONCLUSION

From the foregoing paragraphs it will be noted that the forebears of Lena VanderPyl extend back, in all branches of the family, to times antedating the Revolution, and in most arms to a period closely following the landing of the Pilgrims. These people were actively identified with the business, social, and political life of the Colonies, and were true pioneers.

In compiling data I have not sought to record the complete story, and have not left the close course of descent except in one or two instances where the matter has proved interesting to me. In charts appended I have given a few of the children of collateral branches but these are not complete by any means. Where the line ends in a name enclosed in a "Box" it is either extinct or I have no information. Where it ends in a circle I have not thought the matter of interest, though I have records.

As far as is known all living VanderPyls are shown in the chart and family records except in the case of my father's cousin, Louis VanderPyl, who is the only other representative of the family in America. Louis is married and has one or more children. He lived for a number of years in Passaic, New Jersey.

It would be very tedious and expensive work to attempt to trace down all the children of the respective families. I shall leave that to be done by those interested.

In closing this sketch I bring to a close the labor of nearly seven years. While it is gratifying to know who our ancestors were, and to learn of their achievements (also to learn that none were hung, nor were fugitives from criminal justice) it is nevertheless a lot of hard work to trace these things down - a task which requires patient search, and I accordingly rest on my arms with some relief.

It is my earnest hope that the material contained in this pamphlet will prove of as much interest to those for whose benefit I have compiled it as it was to myself.

I wish in closing, if I may, to extend thanks to those who have so kindly aided me in my searches, both members of the family and custodians of the public records.

(16.) Ella Green Morarty — Mr Gardner
b. 3/28/1863 - Providence, R.I.
(adopted.)

Note: (a) Grenville must be intended as Greenville
(b) Franklin Morarty has children and grandchildren, but I have no record.
(c) The names of John M. Sr., and John M. Jr., are given in the record in the handwriting of the father of the former, Edmond August, as John Mikel. Mrs. Rebecca Morarty knew her husband and father-in-law as John Mercie. I cannot account for the discrepancy - possibly it was changed - but Edmond Morarty, who selected the name of his son, should be correct.

Note: Gram states that there were in addition to the above children four more, born dead. This I haven't verified.

APPENDIX

SMITH: Samuel Smith embarked from London on the Elizabeth on November 12, 1634, with his children, as follows: Samuel - 9, Mary - 4, Elizabeth - 2, Phillip - 1.

GRISWOLD: The Chapter on the Griswold's should show that John Griswold (who married Hannah Lee) was the son of Matthew Griswold and grandson of the original Matthew. Plate has been corrected but the text is subject to this notation. Franklin Morarty's records show the father of Captain Benjamin Griswold as Robert.

WOLCOTT: Henry Wolcott, father of Matthew Griswold's wife, and from whom also was descended Usurla Wolcott, wife of Matthew III, came to Dorchester in 1630, on the Mary and John, and was one of the founders of that city. He was also a founder of Windsor, Connecticut. He married, in England in 1606, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas D. Saunders, and held a number of offices under the government of the Colonies.

VANDERPYL: The most reliable records show the dates of Adrian to be 1797-1875.

DENISON: Ann Denison (born November 10, 1769), wife of Edmond Morarty and mother of John M. Sr., was a descendent of William Denison (1586-1653/4), who came to Roxbury in 1631; through Captain George Denison, a magistrate at New London, who served under Cromwell. George married Lady Ann Borodel and settled in Mystic, Connecticut.

The following relatives of Lena Morarty VanderPyl have served in the various American Wars. These are close relatives and the list does not include those outside of those of the family with whom she had personal contact.

Grandfather: John M. Morarty,

Father: John M. Morarty,

Uncles: Andrew Morarty, Theodore E. Smith,
Edwin Wetherell, Albert C. Smith,
Charles W. Johnson, Calvin Case Smith,
Leander Brown, Allen Moore,
James E. York.

Cousins: Edwin Leach, Bradford Smith,
Charles Setchell, George Smith,
George Case Setchell.

Second Cousins:
David Case, * James Parkinson,
Bailey Case, * Josiah Parkinson,
Joseph Case, * Varney Parkinson,
Stephen Johnson, * Benoni Parkinson,

Sons: Robert A. VanderPyl (#), Harry B. VanderPyl,

Sons-in-Law: William G. Moore, Everett C. Bryant,

Nephews: Lyman M. VanderPyl, J. Harry Evans, (X)
Ellis C. VanderPyl, (3) Lafayette E. Evans. (x)

Third Cousins:
Fred Morarty, John Albert York,
Byron York.

* Killed in Battle
# Army Field Clerk, A.G.O.
X ~~Captain~~ Major, Medical Corps,
x Lieutenant Colonel, Engineers,
3 Gassed in action. Awarded Croix de Guerre with Palm by French Government.

LEACH: Further search discloses that Giles Leach, who heads Plate VII, was in Bridgewater, Massachusetts, in 1665, and that he was the son of LAWRENCE LEACH, born about 1606, who appears in Salem in 1629. This carries the Leach branch in America back thirty years earlier than at first noted.

EDGERTON: Captain James Edgerton (1761-1842) appears as a Revolutionary soldier. What relationship may have existed between him and the Edgertons of the Civil War I am not informed.

WETHERELL: Sackford Wetherell came from London to Elizabeth, Virginia, January 23, 1624.

YORK: James York, age 21, came to Virginia in the "Phillip" from London June 20, 1635.

PARKINSON: James Parkinson came from London to Barbados on the "Alexander" May 2, 1635. Barbados was a penal colony but there is no indication that this Parkinson was a felon, sincè no term of servitude is registered opposite his name as is usual. He was apparently therefore a passenger or member of the crew.

Dorothie Parkinson died in Virginia between April of 1622 and February of 1623, indicating the existence of a family of Parkinsons in Virginia shortly after 1620.

Whether the Parkinsons, Yorks, Wetherells or Edgertons in our family are descendents of the above would hinge upon whether our family records show them in America before 1700. These are the only sailings of record between 1600 and 1700 and I would say were the ancestors of these people unless the families came here after the latter date.

LEACH: Further search discloses that Giles Leach, who heads Plate VII, was in Bridgewater, Massachusetts, in 1665, and that he was the son of LAWRENCE LEACH, born about 1609, who appears in Salem in 1639. This records the first British in America book thirty years earlier than at first noted.

MIDDLETON: Captain James Edgerton (1761-1842) appears as a Revolutionary soldier. What relationship may have existed between him and the Edgertons of the Civil War I am not informed.

WETHERELL: Deleford Wetherell came from London to Elizabeth, Virginia, January 25, 1636.

YORK: James York, age 23, came to Virginia in the "Philip" from London June 30, 1635.

PARKINSON: James Parkinson came from London to Barbados on the "Alexander" May 8, 1635. Barbados was a penal colony but there is no indication that this Parkinson was a felon, since no term of servitude is registered opposite his name as is usual. He was apparently there a passenger or master of his own.

Records Parkinson died in Virginia between April of 1638 and February of 1639, ending the existence of a family of Parkinsons in Virginia shortly after 1650.

Whether the Parkinsons, Yorks, Wetherells or Edgertons in our family are descendants of the above would hinge upon whether our family records show them in America before 1700. These are the only meetings of records between 1600 and 1700 and I would say were the ancestors of these people unless the families came here after the latter date.

POTTER-SMITH

Rhode Island marriage records show the marriage of John Smith and Elizabeth Potter, at Newport, who evidently were the parents of John Potter Zmith, though we haven't this definitely. The Potter family originated in America with Robert Potter (1610-55) who came to Lynn in 1630 and moved to Newport in 1638.

MORRARTY-DENNISON

William Dennison, born 1586, came to Roxbury in 1631, died November 26, 1655, married ~~Elizabeth~~ Margaret, and had sons Daniel, Edward and George.

George Denison, born in England 1618, married (1) Bridget Thompson, returned to England and fought as a Captain under Cromwell, was wounded at Naseby and nursed by Ann, dau. of John Borodel, returning with her after marriage to her to Roxbury, thence to Stonington. He was a magistrate of New London. Had children by Ann Borodel (called Lady Ann but thought not to be noble family): John, Ann, Borodel, George, William, Margaret and Mercy.

John Denison, (Captain), born July 14, 1646. Married Phebe, dau. of Robert and Sarah Lay, and died 1689. Had children: John, George, Robert, William, Daniel, Samuel, Ann, Phebe and Sarah.

Robert Denison (Captain), born September 6, 1673, and married Joanna (Gardner) Stanton, dau. of Robert and Joanna Stanton of New London, and had:
Ann, John, Joanna, Mary, Robert, Nathaniel, Andrew, Sarah, Ann, Thomas, Lucy, Elizabeth, Abigail and George.

Colonel Robert Denison, born 1697. Captain in General Roger Wolcott's brigade (See Wolcott). Present at capture of Louisburg and cited for bravery. Promoted to Colonel and married (1) Deborah, dau. of Matthew and Phoebe Griswold of Lyme (See Griswold) who died in 1732. Had by her Deborah, Robert, Elizabeth, Daniel, Andrew, Mary and second Robert. Married (2) Prudence Sherman, dau. of David and Mercy Sherman of New Haven. 1734 ~~Married shortly before~~ He removed to Horton, Nova Scotia (1776). Had by her: David Sherman, Mercy, third Robert, Gurdon, Samuel, Sarah and Eunice.

Andrew Denison, born Connecticut 1728. Married in 1749 Mary Thompson, who died in 1803, and had the following children: Robert, Christopher, Isaac, John, Mary, Elisha, Mercy, Ann and Joseph.

Mary Denison, married John Morrarty, brother of Edmond.

Ann Denison, married Edmond Augustus Morrarty. Note the similarity of children's names (of Edmond) to individuals in the foregoing paragraphs.

The reason for changing the name of Morrarty was not the French Revolution as previously mentioned, but was the exile of the French Canadians from Arcadia. Horton was the township in which was located Grand Pre, made famous by Longfellow's Evangeline, and in Horton there was one Jean Nuiratte, who signed the oath of allegiance to George II in 1730, but refused to sign the oath of 1755 which called for military service under England. It was doubtless at this time that the name was changed, from Nuiratte to Moratty, and, later, to Morrarty. The first change may have been to Morratty. There is some evidence that John (husband of Mary) bore the name Moirarty, a little closer to Nuiratte, but at least Edmond writes his name as Morratty.

22. James VI, 1567-1625 (Became James I of England and Ireland in 1603) the First Stewart King of England.

Robert II married Euphemia, daughter of Sir Hugh de Ross, Earl of Ross, who himself married Lady Maud Bruce, sister of King Robert the Bruce. His sister married Edward, brother of Bruce. Hugh had Hugh of Rariches, 1st of Balnagown, Who had William of Rariches, Second of Balnagown, who had Walter, Third of Balnagown, who had Hugh, Fourth of Balnagown, who had (1) John, Fifth of Balnagown and (2) Hugh, First of Balmachy. From these two sons are descended the American Rosses one of whom married a Leach and was the mother of Ann Leach, wife of John Potter Smith.

This family begins with Skeagh Macduff, second son of Constantine, Third Earl of Fife. Skeagh obtained Inverness Castle from Malcom IV in 1163.

Their Captaincy of Clan Chattan begins with Angus, in 219 1291, who succeeded to the Chieftainship by reason of his marriage with a daughter of Gilpatrick, Chief of Clan Chattan.

Lachlan Mackintosh, 8th Captain of Clan Chattan, about 1400.
Alexander Mackintosh, 9th Captain, 1415.

Executed by the Earl of Huntley, his patron, in 1550 vi LACHLAN MOR MACKINTOSH, 16th Captain, 1550 to past 1607.
married AGNES MAC KENZIE (See 1 at vi) of Kintail, daughter of Earl of Seaforth. He was called Lachlan of Knocknagail but evidently held also Borlum and is doubtless one of the sons of William who, at the behest of his mother, slew the Provost of Inverness because of a fancied insult.
Angus, brother of Lachlan, died 159[illegible], before his brother. His son, Sir Lachlan Mackintosh, was 17th Chief of Clan Chattan. He married August 16, 1611, Agnes Grant (b. 1594) who later married Lachlan of Borlum, her husband's cousin.
John of Dalziel, brother of Lachlan, married Christine Mackay in 1589.
Malcom, brother of Lachlan, married Janet McDonald, dau. of Alister McAngus McDonald.
Isobel, married December 16, 1605, Sir Robert Campbell.
WILLIAM of Essick and Borlum, second son of ~~William, 15th~~ Lachlan, 16th Captain, married daughter of Robert Innes (d. 1627)
Lachlan, Second of Borlum, son of William, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Grant, his cousin's widow.
William of Borlum, married (1656) Mary Baillie, ~~son~~ of Baillie of Dunain.

Brigadier General William Mackintosh, called "Old Borlum," uncle and guardian of John Mor McIntosh.
Lachlan of Knocknagail, second son of William and Mary Baillie and father of John Mor McIntosh.
Married Mary Lockhart, son of John of Inverness, a descendant of the Lockhart who carried Bruce's heart to the Holy Land.
John Mor McIntosh, married Marjory Stuart Fraser, dau. of Fraser of Garthmore.
Lachlan McIntosh, (spelled by his father Lacklan)(one of the twelve children of John Mor McIntosh) who married Sarah Threadcraft.
Fannie Maria McIntosh (b. about 1785) married (1) Captain Benjamin Griswold, and (2) Daniel Miner.
Mary Marie Griswold, married John M. Morrarty, Sr.
John M. Morrarty, Jr., married Rebecca Ann Smith, descendant of the Rosses.
Casalena Ellsworth Morarty, married Adrian VanderPyl.

Notes: In 1689 the Mackintoshes held charters from Donald Lord of the Isles, to Keppoch, Glenspean, Glenroy and the Braes of Lochaber.

The Lairdship of Borlum was passed from Brigadier William to his son Shaw, thence to Shaw's son Edward, who was outlawed and fled to France. Some say that he came to America and held high rank under Washington but apparently they are confusing him with Lachlan. There is no evidence that John Mor McIntosh ever held the Lairdship of Borlum as claimed by his biographer. For the offense for which Edward was outlawed his brother Alexander was executed, but it was subsequently found that he was not guilty of the offense, though Edward may have been. Borlum, which had been reduced to the estate at Raitts with Edward, passed out of the hands of the McIntosh family with his flight.

John Mor McIntosh was the first to protest (to the Board of Trustees of the Colonies, in England) against the introduction of slaves into the Colonies, particularly Georgia.

Roderick (Rory), grandfather of Colonel Mackintosh, the Creek Chieftain, was a brother of John Mor McIntosh.
